

OKLAHOMA CITY WRITERS, INC.

November Speaker:

Marcia Preston

Topic: Annual Contest Awards

Marcia Preston's career answers the burning question: What can you do with an English degree? She has edited two national magazines, taught high school English, served as PR director for a museum, and freelanced for a long list of publications. Her six novels have been published in at least seven languages and have earned a Mary Higgins Clark Award, an Oklahoma Book Award for Fiction, and four OWFI Best Book of Fiction awards. Her next, titled The Spiderling, is due out in 2018. She's a past president and honorary life member of both Oklahoma City Writers and OWFI, as well as a gardener, amateur lepidopterist and birdwatcher.

Good news! Shelley contacted St. Luke's and we are scheduled in the same room (130) for 2018.

President's Message

by Shelley Pagach

November is National Novel Writers Month, NaNoWriMo for short. It's when you set aside your life to write 50,000 words in 30 days. I have accepted this challenge for several years now, and have won at least twice. It's a great way to turn off your inner editor and just put words on a page.

At the same time, it can be very daunting. I'm struggling this year, because my plate is too full. I'm juggling too many balls to do the challenge justice. But... I now have a list of project ideas I've been wanting to flesh out. I have a complete outline for one of them, which I didn't have before. And I have almost 8,000 new words.

I'm finding moments to write, when I wouldn't normally think of writing. It's amazing how much you can get done when you only have a few minutes to spare.

This challenge shows how important it is to set goals, but it's also important to be proud of the effort even when you don't quite hit the mark. I may not end up with 50,000 words, but I'll have more new words than I did before I began. I can work with that.

Get it down. Take chances. It may be bad, but it's the only way you can do anything really good.

~~William Faulkner

Thanksgiving dinners take eighteen hours to prepare. They are consumed in twelve minutes. Half-times take twelve minutes. This is not coincidence.
